

EXECUTIVE ORDERS

Your Constitutional Liberties Are In Jeopardy

In the event of significant national crisis, American citizens must consider the threat to their freedoms found in the question, "How will the government respond?"

President Clinton has already declared 12 distinct "national emergencies," all currently in force. Once a national emergency is declared, a President may use executive orders to exercise emergency powers. Some powers come from Congress. Others are asserted without any statutory or Constitutional authority. All may have substantial impact upon or suspend First Amendment rights and freedoms including the freedom to speech, freedom of assembly and freedom of religion.

Americans are especially vulnerable at this time precisely due to the character vacuum in the executive branch. Character does, in fact, count. Presidential powers in a national emergency are not limited to that particular emergency. Presidential character is our sole protection against the dictatorial use of executive orders.

The Following Executive Orders Are Already on the Books, Giving the President Power to Suspend the United States Constitution

EXECUTIVE ORDER

- 11051 - Provides the Office of Emergency Planning, complete authorization to put the above orders into effect in times of increased international tension or economic or financial crisis.
- 12919 - Signed by Bill Clinton June 3, 1994. Encompasses all of the above Executive Orders, placing them actively into his hand upon his sole discretion.

FAILURE TO PREPARE will result in fear. Fear produces panic. Panic becomes pandemonium. Pandemonium results in chaos. Chaos demands government intervention. Your preparation is the BEST PROTECTION, against loss of liberty.
